The country's new deputy premier, Simha Ehrlich, told a meeting of the Liberal Party executive last night that he will give the government two months to shape up. If things do not improve by then, the will quit

The meeting was closed to the '> press, but Ehrlich's statements were reported to The Jerusalem Post by e several participants.

Ehrlich and other speakers also fiercely attncked Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon. (eee story npage 2)

Ehrlich thus began settling political accounts with the Likud and the coalition, saying that now he is out of the Treasury, he is much freer to speak his mind. There were secret deals behind the recent government reshuffle, he hinted, adding that the main gains had been made by the National Religious Party. "These are not yet public knowledge, but when the facts are revesled they will make us all blush," Ehrlich said.

He complained that the Liberal er Party is now "on the margins of the is afraid to move against the NRP or the Democratic Movement, and the only victims are the Liberals," said Ehrlich.

TEL AVIV. - Thousands of security personnel are still searching the north and centre of the country for the murderer of Metalla eccurity coordinator Yosef Rosenfeld, whose body was discovered Wednesday night in a ditch near the road from Metulia to Kibbutz Kfar Giladi..

The murder and the discovery of Rosenfeld's Jeep near Netanya a few hours later, is being investigated by a special team.

"We still don't have answers to many questions," a eemior officer told The Jerusalem Post.

"At first we thought it was a terrorist attack. Then we thought the murderers were amugglers from Southern Lebanon. Later it was suggested that these were people Roseofeld came across accidentally when they were in the act of committing some crime. All possibilities are still heing considered." the officer

the courts, as in the Eilon Moreh

Begin also asked Zamir and his aides to prepare a full dossier, complete with maps, on the land-ownership situation on the West Bank, so that ministers can see just how much state land there is, and precisely where it is.

Begin yesterday informed the Eilon Moreh cettlers and other Gush Emunim leaders that he would not meet with them since the Ministerial Defence Committee had designated Defence Minister Ezer Weizman as its representative in the matter. The settlere had refused to meet Weizman, claiming his positions were too opposed to theirs.

Weizman for his part, in a low-key telephone conversation with Eilon Moreh leaders, urged them to come up to his Tsl Aviv office today to "talk about everything." (see

Liberals blast Sharon's stand on Eilon Moreh

By SARAH HONIG Post Political Reporter

INVIAIR IAEAA2

TEL AVIV. - Members of the Liberal Party Executive yesterday launched unprecedented attacks against Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon. But the party's top body stopped short of requesting that Prime Minister Menahem Begin sack Sharon.

The Liberal Executive called for strict implementation of the High Court of Justice decision on Eilon Moreh. It called on the settlers not to resist a move to a different site "in these extraordinary and unusual circumstances."

The demand that Sharon be expelled from the government was officially made by representatives of the Liheral Youth. But the main force behind the motion was MK Pessah Grunder. According to some of his fellow Liberals, he has been more resentful than ever of Sharon because the minister would not appoint him deputy agriculture minister, a post to which he has long

New Deputy Prime Minister Simha Ehrlich was outspoken on the question of Eilon Moreh. In no properly run system can a minister exempt himself from a government decision without drawing his conclusions. It is unthinkable that a minister in our government would go to the Eilon Moreh settlers and encourage them to disobey the High Court ruling and the government, Ehrlich sald. Ehrlich also sharply attacked Sharon for having encouraged the women occupying the Hadassah building in Hebron. He called on the government to carry out the Eilon Moreb ruling to the letter, "painful as it might be." Yet Ehrlich insleted that "although we may harbour certain opinions about Sharon, one party cannot decide on the tenure of a minister from another party."

This was also the view express by Energy Minister Yitzhak Moda'i. who has had Grupper'e support throughout the past months of strife in the Liberal Party.

The Liberal ministers cautioned that the party must avoid 'dangerous decisions" in order not to upset the delicate equilibrium in the cabinet, and to allow the government a period of grace following the appointment of Yigael Hurvitz as finance minister.

The Liberals have a long running feud with Sharon. They have not yet backed down from their demand that the Israel Lands Administration be removed from the Ministry of Agriculture and transferred to the Energy Ministry. They had been demanding the sale of public land to ease the housing shortage, a move also staunchly opposed by Sharon.

West Bank group charged with nine terrorist actions

By YOBAM BAR n Post Reporter

One man and three women from the West Bank have been charged with belonging to a Fatah group which committed nine terrorist attacks in which six civilians were killed and 123 wounded.

A charge cheet against Jamal Yasin, 22, Nadia al-Tiat, 21, of El-Bira, Hanan Masia, 21, of Ramallah and Ataf Yusuf, 22, of El-Janiya, was. presented yesterday ln Tsl Aviv District Court.

In the 15-page indicfment, central District Attorney Sarah Sirota describes the terrorist attacks at-tributed to the four.

"In 1978, Yasin enlisted the three female defendants into a group belonging to Fatah. At the heginning of 1979 Kasin added Ziad Tarifi to the group, and appointed Tiat in charge of the women. Yasin sent the three women to the organization's headquarters for financial aid, weapons and explosives, and for training in terrorist camps.

"On January 18 this year Yasin made a bomb from an explosive brick with a nine-volt battery detonator, a clock and electric wires He carried the bomb to Bir Zeit University and handed it over to George Dadush, another member of the group. Dadush placed the bomb in a vegetable stall in the Mahaneh Yehuda market. The bomh exploded at 10:40 a.m., wounding 24 people.

"On May 11 this year Gamal and Tarifi placed an explosive they had prepared on Rehov Hagalll. Tiberias, and as a result two people were killed and 40 injured." Then Yasin allegedly prepared another bomh in El-Bira, which he placed in a enack har in East Jerusalem. Its explosion injured nine persons. On another occasion, Yasin and Tiat allegedly put a bomh in a garbage pail in Netanya, which killed three and injured 30. The rest of the attacks were in Jerusalem and Netanya. One person was killed and 15 injured. The four defendants were captured after Yusuf allegedly tried to put a homb in Jerusalem's central bus station. Security forces patroliing the area noticed her movements and caught her.

cabinet comes out with a major credible settlement programme along the lines proposed by the Defence Ministry, and if moreover the ministers try to devise legal ways of preventing future challenges to the settlements, then the "atmosphere" surrounding the Ellon Moreh issue will "improve." Hammer cannot, of course, undertake that the settlers would then agree to leave the site peaceably. But his message to the premier is certainly that the chances of avoiding a physical controntation would be increased. Hammer's aides stressed yester day that he was definitely not suggesting that the government attempt to sidestep the High Court ruling on Kilon Moren.

JOSHUA BRILLIANT adds:

Gush Emunim and Eilon Moreh leaders will this morning reconsider their refusal to discuss their settlement's future with Weizman.

Weizman was instructed by the Ministerial Defence Committee to try to come to terms with the settlers on where they would live after they leave Eilon Moreh until a new site near Nablus is ready for them. However the settlers wrote Begin a letter criticising Weizman and asked to see the prime minister.

The prime minister's bureau chief, Yehiel Kadishal, told Ellon Moreh leader Benni Katsover that "it hadn't entered Begin's mind" to see them if they refused to talk to the defence minister The Eilon Moreh leaders earlier this week had agreed to meet Weizman. But they changed their mind after hearing reports about Weiz-man's insistence that they he removed from the settlement and rumours that he had said in the Knesset cloakroom that they would come "on all fours" to the Defence Ministry.

During Kadishai's telephone conversation with Katsover, Wcizman walked into the aide's office, took the phone and repeated his invitation. Katsover told The Post ha detected a conciliatory note in the minister'e position when Weizman said their meeting will succeed and "I am asking you for the third time to come." Gush Emunim is claiming that only the 125 dunams belonging to 17

Arahs from Rujelh village, who appealed to the High Court, must be evacnated by November 22, the Court's deadline. New legislation should prevent land owners from appealing future seizures for settlement. Then new orders should be issued, in accordance with the new legislation to seize those 125 dunams. In the meantime the settlers would stay on the 575 dunams whose requisition had not been contested in the courts.

Ofira Navon learns cancer isn't the end

By JUDY STEGEL Jerusalsm Post Reporter

"Life looks different," says Ofira Navon, "after you undergo treatment for cancer. You realize what things are really important — like family, faith and friendship."

The wife of the president was cheerful, frank and serene during an interview at Belt Hanasel yesterday - just an hour after undergoing her first chemotherapy injection at Hadassah University Hospital and a day after returning bome from treatment in the U.S.

Before she discovered last August that she had breast cancer, Mrs. Navon thought that the disease meant a hopeless end. Since then, she has learned that there are a hundred types of cancer, and various stages to each one. It bas been reported that one-third of all cases in Israel are cured and in many others lifs can be prolonged.

"Every woman must check berseif; early detection is vital," the president's wife urges, when asked to advise others who find themselvea in the same spot. 'Two million American women have it. It hits seven out of 100 women in the U.S. and five out of 100 in Israel. The earlier you receive treatment, the better off you are.'

As she speaks, the example of Bettv Ford - whose discovery of breast cancer and her frank talk about It from the White House induced many women to be examined and treated - comes to mind.

Ofira Navon went to Beth Israel Hospital in Boston for special treatment, involving the implantation of radioactive needles, on the advice of her doctors at Tel Hashomer and Hadassah Hospitals, after she underwent an operation for the removal of the localized tumour. The technique ls as yet unavailable in

But the president'e wife brings the good news that the implantation tschnique will he in Israel in "a fev months. The equipment is already aboard ship." A Hadassah doctor will study under Dr. Samuel Hellman at Beth Israel to learn the technique and use his expertise bere.

Doctors in Jerusalem insisted that Mrs. Navon undergo a mastectomy — the traditional treatment for breast cancer over the last 80 years. "I had to fight like mad against lt," she recalls. She had read that in the U.S., doctors automatically explain to patients both the radical surgery procedure and the 10-year-old technique involving removal of only the tumour followed by radiation and chemotherapy. Then, women may choose between the disfiguring and often psychologically damaging mastectomy and the riskler, more experimental approach. At Tel Hashomer, Mrs. Navon had the

with her before and after her hospitalization. Her candid explanation for not taking someone from Israel is that she worried about eriticism in the prees and elsewhere that she was wasting public money.

Offra Navon was amused by the fact that - for security reasons she had to go under an assumed name, "I was 'Judith Cohen' - a name picked out by our cinhassy. When i answered the phone I was 'Judith Cohen' and the name is even on the luggage. The staff in the hospital used that name, hut gradually they asked if they could eall mc 'Mrs. Navon' and finally they ealled me 'Ofira'."

She was overwhelmed by the outpouring of good whehee here and abroad. Everyone from Britaln's Queen Elizabeth to local schoolchildren sent her get-well greetinge. The private residence is filled with floral bouquets; on a table is a heart shaped cake sent as the gift of a Jerusalem bakery.

Although "it was the fartheet thing from my mind at this point," Mrs. Navon will attend a conference on the International Year of the Child in Acapulco and Mexico City for five days at the end of this month. She will be the guest of the wife of the Mexican president.

Zimbabwe woman dies as talks move on

LONDON (Reuter). — As Rhodesian peace talks entered a crucial phase in London with the intervention of Zambian Prasident Kenneth Kaunda, a black woman died and another had her hand blown off in Umtall, on the eastern Zimbabwe Rhodesla frontier, as a bomb planted by Patriotic Front guerrilias exploded in a department store.

It was the third bomb attack on an Umtali shop in four weeks, in what appears to mark a new approach by the guerrillas, who have rarely used urban bombings during their sevenyear campaign.

In London, Parliament was urgently debating legislation needed to settle the independence dispute, and despite the denials by Patriotic Front guerrilias at the conference, British officials insisted that a settlement was close. The next 24 hours were vital, they added.

Britain clearly hoped Kaunda'e intervention would be dscisive and that the Zambian leader — one of the gusrrilias' principal backere would help persuade the Patriotic Front to come to terms, after nine wesks of largely ineffective talks attempting to settle the bloody 14vear independence dispute.

Kaunda is expected to repeat his call for a Commonwealth force possibly drawn from Canada, India, Ghana and Nigeria — to belp maintaln peace after a ceasefire le declared.

Kaunda will not attend the negotiations, but will hold eeparate meetings with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the guerrilla

Meanwhile the House of Commons hegan a marathon sitting to rush through a bill enabling the Conservative government to put a Britisb governor back into Salisbury. But it will only be implemented if the talks acbieve a eettlement. Some Labour politicians suepect that if the Patriotic Front refuse to sign a eettlement, the bill could be used by the government "to hand over to Muzorewa," and move Zimbabwe Rbodeela to legal independence without the guerrillas' participation.

the SRAELI ARAB parents take a reater interest in their children's progress at school than do their jewish counterparts. And Israell-Arnb parente encourage their hildren more than Jewish parents o read during leisure hours and to ipend time in museume and to heatres.

This is one of the conclusions of a major study of Israeli Arab youth ecentry published by the Henrietta sold Institute for the Bebavioural Sciences in Jerusalem.

The team of researchers, headed The team of treetor Dr. Hanan chally institute director Dr. Hanan Rapaport and consisting of Tel Aviv Iniversity Arabist Dr. Mattityahu Peled and researchers Mordechai eimor and Haim Mano, also found hat Arab youths' repudiation of the Jewish state and of their Israeli Idenity was not as widespread as radical Faraeli Arab student activity on university campuses might suggest.
Setting out on their study which reeks to examine the Arab youths' knowledge, attitudes and behaviour in social and political matters, the researchers assumed that 'the Arab routh believes that there is a suppression of elvil and political ninority and that the state is not inerested in peace. After all, saye Rnpaport, the eraeli Arab youth daily encounters eminders of his "eccond-class izenship and of the acote condition discrimination" in which he

One-third of Israel's Arabs -63,397 — attend educational in-titutions, 14 times the number who ttended kindergartens, schools and imiversities in 1949 (though Israel'e Arab community has grown only 3.6 times in that time).

But the level of education in the Arab sector is far lower than in the Jewish sector, enye Rapaport, a climical psychologist and director of the institute since 1965. Only 8 per nt of Arabs entering first grade cent of Arabs entering first grade can expect to smerge from the school system with a matriculation certificate, compared to 24 per cent in the Jewish sector.

ay, The study also found that among Israel'e Arabs over the age of 14, 36.6 per cent are illiterate, compared to 9 per cent among Jews. One of the mreasons for this disparity might be withe fact that 48 per cent of the impleachers in the Arab sector are study, compared to 12 per cent in the Jewish education system.

Among other statistics to emerge: 1.: 14.5 per cent of adult Arabs are employed in white-collar jobs, compared to 41 per cent among Jews; 51 g per cent of Jewish families live in conditions of one person or less a lamilies enjoy such conditions; 52 per cent of Jewish families have telephones, compared to 7 per cent of Arab families; 28 per cent of Jewish families have cars, while only 11.5 per cent of Arab families have them: mly 54 per cent of Arab families navs refrigerators, compared to 98 Yet the researchers found that thout balf the youths questioned did not feel they suffered from restriclons of their political freedoms, that criticism of the state and its intitutions was possible, that they bad he potential to effect ebange, and religious origin did not prevent them from obtaining "important posts," while 65 per cent did not feel discriminated against or barred from "public places" because of their origin. But between 78 and 86 per cent of those questioned felt that "private house owners" barred peo-ple from their homes because of their origin. ife in Israel is by no means rosy,"

-tays Rnpaport. "But be knows
-nough nbout conditione in neighbouring Arab states and has heard enough about life for the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza before 1967 to realize that life in Israel isn't all that bad."

But Rapaport conceded that the. researchers found that the Arab youths' view of Israel became more. ocgative as be grew older.

THE STUDY, for which the field work was done in 1976, involved 25 classes of Israeli Arab ninth graders (817 children) and 24 classee of sleventh graders (727 children). The - composed of Moslem, Christian and Druse Arabs — were chosen from schools representing the neademie; vocational and agricultural streams ne well as junior high schools and, in the easc of come ninth grades, elementary schools. The pupils selected consisted almost equally of males and

The pupile were individually tested and did not put their names on the questionnaires, which eet out to discover the extent of their knowledge of "citizenship" and "government," attltudee to democracy, equality and tolerance, social and political involvement, and their social activities.

It also sought to identify the fac-tors governing the Arab youths' political and social attitudes and ehaviour, with particular regard to the school, the family and his cocial

The results of the questionnaires were compared in results obtained previously from Jewieh ninth graders and, occasionally, with inswers by ninth graders from a handful of other Wastern democratic countries.

GIVEN THE nature of the Israeli Arab school system, the researchers were not surprised by the relatively poor showing of Israeli Arab youths on social end political matters. Asked about "basic concepts of govern-ment and citisenship," Jewish ninth traders on average answered 67 per cent of the questions correctly, while their Arab counterparts answered only 43 per cent of the questions correctly. The gap widened considerably. achieving ratios of 58:22 and 54:13 in juestions relating to political and social matters. Subjected to con-servative teaching methods, Israeli Arab youths are taught, indeed com-pelled, to Isam things by heart — Concepts, datee, namee, definitions, said Rapaport, "When d comes to analysis and understanling of affairs, they fall flat on their

Rnpaport firmly dismiseee suggestions that there may be ethnic IQ differences: "All recent Israeli studies on the matter clearly show that there is absolutely no difference in intelligencs and intellectual potentiai Israeli Jewish and Israeli Arab ehildren," he saye.

THE QUESTIONNAIRES used in testing both the Jewisb and Arab pupils included such questions as :
"Which of the following represents the clearest infringement of civil rights in a democracy? l. An armed, uniformed policeman entering a eynagogue during

2. A policeman bursting into a private gathering where the participants are busy criticising the

3. A policeman arresting a group of people planning a revolt against the government.

4. A civil servant suing a journalist who attacked him in an article. 5. A man carrying an unlicensed pistol being arrested and fined."

In a citizenship test (which include ed such questions), Israeli Jewish ninth graders came in third place among pupils from nine democratic countries. Israeli Arab ninth graders came last, well below the performances of Italian and Irish ninth gradere: Ieraeli Arnb slaventb gradere came eighth, an indication that between the ninth and eleventh gradee n proportion of the less capable pupils had dropped out.

Corroboration of thie point is provided by the comparitive results of Moslem, Christian and Druse Arab pupils in the ninth and eleventh grades in the eltizonship test: In the ninth grade, Moslems ecored 15.0, Christians 17.4 and Druse 14.9 (indieating the initial higher level of education among Israeli Christian Arab familiee). But Moelem eleventh graders, taking the eame test, scored 22.6, Christians 22.8 and Druse 22.1 — Indienting that the academie accomplishments of those tested from the three Arab religious communities had levelled off, (Incidentally, Jewish ninth graders of Israeli-born parents scored 27.0 on thie test; Those of European or American parentage scored 28.0. while those of Afro-Asian parentage scored 22.2).

RAPAPORT believes that n major reason for the Arab youths! poor per-formancs when tested on political and social matters, including eurrent developments in the Middle East, is that the Arab school and school teacher consciously keep als: cussion of these subjects out of the

"At the forefront of his political concerns is the history of the Arab-Israeli conflict, Its current state and his own, unenviable position at its vortex." said Rapaport. Yet Arab teachers dare not bring up such matters for fear that they might be dismissed, be asserted.

Jewish high echools now teach the Israeli-Arab conflict as a separate, econ-to-be compuleory, course; Israel's Arab schools do not.

'The Israeli authorities are eimp ly burying their heads in the sand when they assert that the subject is too eencitive' for Icraell Arab elassrooms. The Israeli Arab youth is pre-occupied by the subject and discusses it constantly. He "learns" the subject in an unscientific, disorderly manner in the street, often falling into the clutches of pro-PLO Ibna el-Balad activists.

"We cannot hide the subject from them. Our study found that because teachere do not tackle the subject in school, and parents do not discuse it with their children at bome, the main 'politicizing agents' for Israeli Arab youths are their peers, rather than parents or teachers. This is not the ease among Israeli Jewish youths." eaid Rapaport.

"It'e better that the Israel-Arab conflict, and the problems of the Israeli Arabs dual identity be dis-cussed in class and faced head on. We've travelled a long way since Golda Meir denied the existence of a Palestinian people. We can no longer afford to ignore the fact that most young Israell Arabe regard themselves as 'Palestinians' as well as Israeli eltizens," said Rapnport.

HE AGREED that the Israeli Arab echool curriculum had changed a great deal sinec Arab children were subjected to long courses on Zionism, Jewisb Diaspora history and to Bialik's "El Hatsipor."
"But we found in our research that some 10 per cent of the Arab children stili regularly sing "Hatikvn" in class - melodically voicing the 2,000-year-old Jewish hope for national restoration," he said.

"These youths suffer from tremendous internal tensions etsmming from their double political identity. Yet their nationalist drive, their emotional need for a politicalcommunal identity, must be allowed a meaningful outlet and release."

Today, about 40 per cent of the Israell Arab high school history curriculum is devoted to Islamio history and culture, which Rapaport seee as a step in the right direction.

The study shows that 51 to 53 per cent of the youths involved in the eurvey regard the study of Arab language and liternture as enjoyable; by comparison only 33 per cent of Jewieh youths like to study Hebrew language and literature.

"This is a clear expression of the Arab youths' nationallem," eaid

Rapaport strongly believes — as the study recommends — that the Ieraell-Arnb confilet and the realities of the Israell Areb's life in Israel be taught in the Arab schools.

"They should also be offered the possibility of doing national service, in their case meaning a stint of teaching or working in public eervices in their own community. This would offer a major and constructive outlet for the Israeli Arab'e nationalist drive." The researchers discovered that both Jewish and Arab youth in Isreel are extremely intolerant of those holding views contrary to their own: "This shows something about the soealled democratic attitudes we have inculcated in our young," said Rapaport.

Israel comes last among nine democracles in the attitude of ninth graders towards "every citizen's cisim, regardless of occupation, sect or politics," to equal rights. Israeli youths scored 69.5, Holland (81.5) and Ireland (75.9), Israeli Arab ninth graders ecorsd 49.9 on this ecale.

THE RESEARCHERS suggest that the reason Israeli Arab parents care more than their Jewisb counterparts about their children's performance at school is the Arabs' minority

The Israell Arabe, like all minorities, look upon educational achievement as an avenue of upward social mobility. The researchers compare the respect, to that of the Jewe in Western Europe and in the U.S., where parents have high aspirations for their children's acedemie achievement. Rapaport, while not bopeful, was still a long way from despairing shout the political implications of the etudy's findings. He does not believe that the radicalization of Israel's Arabs has gone so far as to make it irreversible, or that Isracl's Arabs will inevitably become an irredentiat fifth column if end when n Palestinian state emergee on Israel's borders.

"No, I believe that the emergence of a Palestinian state, with which Israel's Arabs can identify, will case the crisis of identity which has beset them since 1967. "It will perhaps be like American Jewry and Israel after the creation of the etate: Israel's emergence uplifted American Jews and gave them a cource of national pride, without causing them to merge their personal destinies with that of the new

But, warned Rapaport, "If Israel continues to ignore the lot of its Arab citizene, we will inevitably witness e terrible explosion."

'Certainly we must crase the physical consequences of diserimination — improve the ecbools, the teachers, the economic infrastructure of the community. But we must also begin to accord them respect and recognition as a proud

This was very evident in the

All of them are imbued with a passionate desire to acquire the language, culture and babits of some they can be absorbed into the society. In fact, they fail to dissolve in the pressure-coker; the old way of life refuses to disappear.

I personally think that this is a source of great cultural strength and vitality in Israel. It is hard to accept that the love of Bach, Beethoven and Mozart is really so reprehensible.

organized, although it was not in colour, perhaps because somebody decided that the theme was too sombre to be garishly presented. This was prohably true of the shots of the afflicted children which opened the programme. In fact, the black and white pictures triggered memories of comparable shots of the children of the Holocaust, so this was one occasion when black and white was more effective. The entertainers, of course, suffered due to the lack of colour, but this did not matter much. There were one or two mishaps, perhaps inevitable in organizing so complicated an event. At one stage, Yaron London was eaught off guard for the first time in his life when he was suddenly asked to talk to Israsl's ambassador in Thailand, while some technician was still working around him, and made a frantic exit behind the U.S.

Hc reduced the penalties to two- or three-year etretches of imprisonment, giving the impression — intentionally or not — that killing captured Arab terrorlete is not altogether a eerious crime.

These etartling ects of leniency aroused indignetion and criticism. Lt. Daniei Pinto'e two-year sentence iplus reduction to the ranke) for deepatching four Arabs, allegedly through strangulation, was not eubstantially greater than the judgment Imposed on a Bat Yam civilian for seiling bogus car-ineurance certificatee, or on a certain reetaurant chef for defrauding a kitchen-maid of ILS.000_

The sense of outrage among the public was initially muted by a feel-ing of doubt ebout the accuracy of the information leaked to them. A veil of secrecy had been pulled down by the military over the whole affair, on the plea thet the courts-martial had declared the trials of Pinto and Sadeh to be classified.

This posture was baffling. Questions shout the offences committed by Plnto and Sadeb were answered hy army apokesmen with regretful disclaimers. Our lips are seeled, they said. We would tell you If we could, but we can't.

Might it he that the misdeeds of the two officers were not quite as terrihle ae depicted ln Url Avnery's memorende? The whole matter is mystlfying heceuse the army has not actually denied the content of Avnery'e assertlons. It castigated hlm for letting the meterial he published abroad, not for transmitting falee information.

On the other hand, there is a certain ambivalence in the decisions not just of the Chief-of-Staff, but of the courts themselves. Though denied access to the proceedings of the trials, we do know the verdicts. They seem extraordinarily mtid, given the apparent severity of the offences. Pinto was condemned to 12 years which, for a multiple murder charge, is not much. His appeal was heard by a bench of five judges, presided over by no less a person than Justice of the Supreme Court Meir Shamgar. This tribunal eaw fit to reduce the sentence from 12 years

If an appeals court of top callbre could pronounce that a penalty of 12 years was excessive, then it is hard to believe that Pinto's crime was as savage and ruthless as Avnery

But then again, If there are mitigating circumstances, why are they not made known? The secret is hlown, the story has been published all over the world. What is there left

The law empowers the army to

The facts available about the Chief of Staff's decisions to grant clemency to soldiers convicted of murdering Arabs are insufficient to make his judgment understandable or to assuage the public's sense of outrage, writes The Jerusalem Post's DAVID KRIVINE.

Arab governments might use the material ae an excuee for victimielng, when the opportunity arose, whatever Jewish priconers happened to be in their hands.

Given that this justification no longer has much validity, another consideration comes uppermost the need of the public in a democratic society to know what is being done in its name and under the cover of its authority. The law empowers the military to keep certain information under wraps. But it does not oblige them to do so. It is not the intention of Isreel's legal system to allow the discretionary privileges that it grants to he ahused.

And whichever way we look at it, they have heen ahused in these cases. Elther the information should have heen made public, or the sentences should not have heen

THE QUESTION arises why Eitan remitted penalties imposed not just by lower courts-martlal, but by courts of appeal.

He may have had reasons for acting as he did. To his credit he has stressed that the defendants in all three cases were punished, and had to be punished. But he may bave felt that when administering penaltles, one bas to take account of the special tensions affecting the conduct of a soldler in an atmosphere of

He also may have been influenced by the orders that Sadeh claims were given from above calling on all formations to avenge the coast-road bus massacre by fighting a tough war and killing the enemy mercilesely.

The trouble is that we are not dealing here with events on the battiefield. According to the information, edmittedly only partial, in our possession, these harharitiee were committed in cold blood. Sadeh's order that his prisoner be shot was in serious breach of the law.

The reasons given for this systemetic apathy cound like excuses, heceuse they are rooted in considerations of procedure. The government cannot evede its obligations under such a plea. The Defence Minister is not requested under the law to call Eitan to account over the clemency procedure; that is correct. But he can if be wants to. The minister is responsible to the Knesset and the nation for the actions of all members of the armed forces in their military capecity, from the Chief-of-Staff right down to the humblest ranker.

There is nothing to stop Ezer Welzman from at least asking why Eitan thought it proper to reduce the sentences. There is nothing to etop the minister from making that explanation available to an anxious public.

The judges of the courts-martial could quite properly be invited to reconsider their decision to keep the record confidential. There le noreason to think they would refuse. As it happens, the original trial of Pinto was kept secret at the request of the area commander. His motive for making that demand is no longer valld. The story has already been bruited about in its most horrific form. It is time that we should know the truth, wbether the events are palatehle or not. Justice must not only he done, it must be eeen to be

Or are the stories so murky that their release would blacken Israel's good name? Then we are back to square one. If the offence is that parlous - the justification for confirming the centeoces imposed by the courts is reinforced eevenfold. The act of clemency should be invalidated. Individual crimee so grave that they might invite retaliation by the enemy cannot but be punished with all the eeverity of the

In conclusion, there is only one plausible explanation wby corrective measures bave not been taken by the minister, the Cabinet or the saet: the fear of impairing personal prestige of the Chief-of-soldiers and civilians, beyond any possibility of doubt, that murdering non-comhatant Arabs is a helnous crime rating maximum penalties, something is drastically wrong with the judgment of our political leaders. THE IMAGE of the Israel Defence Forces has been tarnished of late by events which are causing growing alicnation between tha people's army and the people, regardless of individual political persuasion. Fallure by the defence minister to step in end claar up come of the fog that has enveloped the IDF, and a lack of a statement elucidating its basic goale and values has only served to undarmine the morale of the regulars, and to feed the donbts of those on the eve of their national eervice or bound to the reserves.

There are 12th graders all over the country who are finding it difficult to. reconcile their educational valuee with service in the IDF. I bave personal knowledge of a number of them. Conversely, many within the service Itself have been badly unecttled by the current dispute over the actions of the Chief of Staff.

The present malaise is a culmination of a number of factors. There is no arguing that the army has been damaged by almost every aspect of the Litani Operation, including the State Comptroller's report; by the apparent discrepancies in military justice; by the fact that young Jews are constantly being brought into confrontation with other young Jews on the hills of Judea and Samaria and the vegetable fields of Neot Sinai: by the discrimination in military eervice for women; hy the increasing use of soldiers to fight Arah high-ecbool and college students rather than enemy armies.

Each of these examples - or a combination of them - have given young people in their formative stages reason to question the framework they will soon be entering for three years and will have to serve in as reserves for decades after that.

They have also led to a good deal of self-questioning inside the military, including the upper echelons, hy perturbed by the conflict that has suddenly erupted hetween

Until very recently, service in an army dedicated to national eurvival was never questioned. Of late, however, the national definition of survival le becoming increasingly questionable, it eeems, to a growing number of youth, and it is a bout time the policy-makers stopped and took stock of where all this is leading to. For what happened? Pinto was suddenly no longer a state secret; the newspapers were filled with comrades-in-arms, that the man was the victim of a political ploy; that he was, of course, innocent of strangling four Lebanese civilians during the Litani Operation; that he was the niceet, smartast, most talented

I HAVE JUST spent several weeks in "il reserve duty, in constant contact with young officers and men at a b training facility. In the eyes of most of them, military justice is a farce. Of course, Eitan's decision to commute the sentence only went to strengthen their conviction. because, they asked, how could any dichief of staff condone the murder of y four innocent civilians? The fact that Pinto was tried by two courts, the second of which included two brigade commanders, one of them appointed, to the bench by Rav-Aluf Eitan because their views were similar is lost in the polemics.

Money Matters

Many bonds 'buyers only' as demand soars

TEL AVIV. - The index-linked bond market swing into high gear as investors reacted to promises by Finance Minister Yigael Hurvitz that there would be no tax imposed on the Prices rose along a broad front with gains of S to 4 per cent common.

In many eases the demand for specific issues was so strong that no trading in them took place. In such cases, at the discretion of the management of the exchange, the price is automatically raised by 3 per cent.

That was the main reason for the trading volume; which totalled only IL124.6m., being so low. Only three sessions earlier the alltime high turnover in one session of IL272.5m. was established. Yesterday's session indicates that the demand will spill over into next week, and many analysis are anticipating further gains in the prices of indexlinked bonds when the exchange reopens on

The badly battered Israel pound, devalued hy some 2.7 per cent earlier this week, also resided to statements by the new finance minister, who assured the public that changes are not imminent in foreign exchange regulations. The pound rallied and gained ten agorot against the American dollar.

After the trading activity was over one money manager quipped that "by next week everyone will have forgottee what happcoed." But for many, the onarly hysterical behaviour of the public, first as sellers of index-linked bonds and then as buyers, is not likely to be quickly out of mind. Neither are the long queues at the banks, as people rushed to withdraw cash in foreign Selling pressures eased yesterday as the chare market put in a mixed performance.

The only group to mova clearly lower was in-dustrial shares.

Commercial bank shares roce, on the average, by 0.5 per cent. The big three — Leumi, Hapoalim and IDB — aach galoed three points. General Bank showed the best galo of the session with a four-point advance. Union Bank and FIBI were two points higher while Mizrahl rose by one point.

Mortgage bank issues were unchanged in quiet trading.

Insurance stocks were a mixed bag, with prica movements relatively small. The major winner in the group was Ararat IL1 shares, which rose by 5.1 per cent.

Land development and real estate cquities were also mixed. Solel Booch was ahead by 40 points, and Bayside IL5 jumped by 5.8 per Industrials trended lower as a number of shares fell by 4 per eent or more. These in-cluded Teva (r), Nechushtan registered and bearer, Taal (b), Elco IL1 and Urdan IL1. Investment company shares were mostly mixed. Central Trade was down by 50 points to 1348 while Elgar (r) rose by 25 to 676. Ampa lost 41 points, a loss of nearly 10 per ccot.

Hurvitz's challenge

YIGAEL HURVITZ takes over the post of Finance Minister under conditions that would daunt any man. He is expected, nay required, to save the country. Else why give the crucial Treasury portfolio to the leader of so small a faction as La'am-Rafi?

The Israel economy has always been run on a loose rein. During the first two decades of statehood, this permitted a breathtaking pace of economic growth. The country continually spent more than it earned — but at least the money was being put to good purpose, and the accompanying trade deficit was always bridged by new sources of Jewish and foreign aid.

The warning of economists like David Horowitz, first Governor of the Bank of Israel, that improvidence must lead to economic breakdown was never fulfilled. The day of reckoning was always put off.

Sometimes production overtook consumption, as in the period after the Yom Kippur War when, under Finance Minister Rabinowitz, the trade deficit was narrowed almost to half. Later financial assistance from the U.S. Government eased the burden of military re-equipment, giving the economy a

Today at last the long-predicted time of reckoning seems to have arrived. A trade deficit that has almost doubled since Yehoshua Rabinowitz was in charge, to reach $4.5 billion, cannot be bridged for more than a year or two ahead.

Simha Ehrlich, as Finance Minister, was not able to correct the distortions of the economy; if anything he sharpened them. He could not channel business activity in the right direction, so as to reduce the country's dependence on outside factors and restore the process of solid economic growth. Can Hurvitz?

· He was chosen as a strong-arm personality, able to Impose unpopular belt-tightening policies on his ministerial colleagues, on the coalition parties, on sectoral interests and on the public at

His task is Indeed daunting, but at least the timing is favourable. The country, critical as it is of the performance of the present regime, will weicome bard policies — so long as they are also just policies. But the public will not take punishment unconditionally. The people are ready to shoulder the burden, provided — as Histadrut chief Yeruham Meshel told TV viewers this week — that burden is evenly shared between all sectors of the community.

Moreover, the burden-sharing must not only exist, it must be

There has been talk of taxing large cars. The tax should be imposed. There bas been talk of restoring the travel tax. That distasteful levy should be enacted too, at least for the period of the present emergency. Fees should be restored in high schools for the well-to-do, suspending Zevulun Hammer's altogether premature scheme of universal free secondary education again for the emergency period.

These measures would not replace the budget-cutting exerciss which is imminent; they would supplement it. No sector in socisty - not even sattlers in Judea and Samaria - can expect exemption from the financial axe that Finance Minister Hurvitz

The reductions will hurt. Jobs in the public sector will be closed, social benefits reduced. Money (and credit) will become scarce in the economy.

. The remedies will be acceptable nevertheless, on condition that Mr. Hurvitz can persuade the electorate that everybody is affected, that nobody is getting away with it. The new Finance Minister needs not only to apply the firm hand, he also needs to evoke the cooperation of the people.

JERUSALEM municipal engineers bave learned that you can lead pedestrians to a bridge but you can't make them cross lt.

A year after the pedestrian bridge over Hebron Road in Talplot was opened, residents of the area still prefer to dodge speeding traffic rather than use the walkway. The Engineering Service Department, nevertheless, has once more repaired the fence aimed at preventing ground-level pedestrian crossovers and the municipality has launched an Information campaign in the nelgbbourhood to encourage them to take the high road.

THERE ARE probably more Israeli ear mecbanics in the U.S. than in Israel. The Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs is trying to bring back these emigrants, whose professional expertise is short bere. It decided to grant government certification to managers of garages who qualify. The emigrants may apply in the U.S., be tested on the spot and receive his certificate after approval by a committee of the Transport Ministry. Those who qualify and want to work as teachers in the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs' vocational training Institutes will be hired immediately.

THE CHAIRMAN of Gulf Oil Corporation, which along with other oil companies has reported huge third quarter earnings, eald recently the profits were still not big enough.

"We hope there will be some further improvement," Jerry McAfee sald in a U.S. television interview, "because even with the present gratifying improvement the profit level, the profitability, the return on investment are still not up to the level that they need to be for us... to do our job."

Gulf's earnings for the third quarter were more than $400m.

ISRAEL TV instituted Meir Shalev's "Hataf Patah" corner to teach the public better Hebrew. But President Yitzhak Navon thinks that Israel TV Itself has a lot to learn. At a recent assembly for the Israel Cancer Society at Beit Hanassi, the President went off on a tangent for a moment and criticized TV announcers and reporters for making frequent errors in Hebrew usage and grammar. Many times, bs noted, they use feminine adjectivas for masculine nouns and vice versa. For example they say "shmoneh esrei million" instead of "shmona asar million. They should know better, concluded the President. "After all, the TV is supposed to be a major educational medium, and it's teaching us incorrect usage."

the peace process if it were returned to power tomorrow?

Until recently, that question would slicit a plethora of confused replies from Labour Party politicians. Sadat's visit to Jerusalem knocked Labour so thoroughly off balance that it has taken the party the best part of two years to recover, to come to grips with the new realities.

Until recently, moreover, the question was asked only in terms of distant hypothesis. It did not seem to matter that Labour policy was at best vague, at worst a rehearsal of worn-out slogans.

Now, however, the question is posed - by voters at home and statesmen abroad - in terms of urgent inquiry. And party leader Shimon Peres now replies with confidance and directness.

"First," he says, "Gaza-first." Labour would revive the idea, rejected by the Begin government, of implementing the autonomy in Gaza as a first stage. "That would give us a breathing space - which we would use to renew the dialogue with Jor-

Sir, - Your editorial comment, "A road is opened to anarchy.

Labour in power would revive the idea of implementing autonomy in Gaza as a first stage, Labour Party leader Shimon Peres tells DAVID LANDAU.

The "Gaza-first" proposal was first mooted publicly by President Sadat towards the and of 1978. Peres says he himself was thinking along the eame lines even before that.

Why, then, did Labour not support the idea later, when the cabinet wrestled with it, and eventually rejected it, causing an almost fatal rupture of the peace talks?

"We did," Peres reveals. "We hinted clearly to the government: If you go along with it, we will support you. it would have been wrong for us. tactically and politically, to 'go public' with our position at that

Prime Minister Begin turned down the Gaza-first proposition because Egypt demanded a haison presence inside Gaza, to encourage the local people to accept the autonomy. Begin saw this as a strategic threat — and as a dangerous precedent for the West Bank.

Peres believes that in a Gaza-first negotiation the Jewish settlements in the Strip (three at present) would not. be a sticking point. Their staying put, moreover, could be a positive precedent for the subsequent West Bank Degotiations.

Stage Two in the Peres etrategy is talking to Jordan. He still believes in the "Jordanian option," still uses the traditional Labour language of a "Jordanlan-Palestinlan

To adopt the Yariv-Shemtov formula, he says, would be 'to signal to the West Bankers that as far as we are concerned they have nothing more to seek from K. 1g Hussein, that they should put all their eggs in the PLO basket."

Premier Begin always argues witheringly that the "Jordanian option" - in terms of the Allon Plan never in fact sxisted except as a figment of Labour's imagination. King Hussein himself, as Begin is fond of DESPITE Peres's consistent "Jordanian orientation," there is a new opennees perceptible in Labour ranks with regard to the Palestinian question. Abba Eban, in several recent articles, wondered whether the 'Jordanian option' is indeed still visble, arguing that Jordan is no longer the moderate, Western-oriented state it used to be. His conBenelux solution, involving Israe Jordan, and a covereign Palestinian entity.

"In foreign affairs, they is no-one who can match tim [Eban]," Peres says. Eban's article. may be seen, then, as the tire shadowy outline of an alternative Labour approach, should the "Jorgan nian option" prové barren.

Peres and Eban are in effect signalling to Hussein that they will when in power, try once again to come to terms with him. (Between the lines one can read, perhaps, readiness for further-reaching oor cessions than Labour was prepare to make in the past.) But if Hussen stands fast in his Rejectionism. solving Defence Minister Moebe Dayan from responsibility for the decisions of the chief of staff, declared that: "It has never been laid down that the minister of defence is a kind of super-chief of staff ... a kind of supreme commander of the army by virtue of his being defence minister.

The Commission thus gave expression to a most important universal principle, and it drew attention to a potential danger which democratic governments take great care to guard themselvee against. The minister responsible for the army is not a soldier. He may have been once - though democratic governments usually avoid giving the defence office to a "retired general." The control of the army by civilian rule must be unflecked by any doubt. Moreover, in time of war a defence minister with a one-time senior army status might decide that he "knows better" and interfere in the army chisf's decisions. No sane nation wants two competing chiefs of staff directing the battlefield. The Elion Moreb court bas turned this principle on its bead. It drew stated without contradiction that he had in fact preferred Weisman'e opinion over that of Chief of Staff Rafael Eitan because Weizman bad once been head of the air force and later operations chief in the Israel Defence

The court thus recognized Weizman as a super-chief above the chief of staff.

It is surprising to recall that the chairman of the court, Justice Landau, was also one of the two Snpreme Court judgee who were members of the Agranat Commission.

This astonishing preoccupation of the court with Weizman was not the result of any submission be made to the court. He was thus not questioned nor cross-examined, either on his expertise or on his reasoning. The only information actually produced in court and quoted in the judgment on the content of Weizman'e views was one sentence in the chief of staff's eubmiselon that Weizman, while agresing on the strategic importance of the area, believed that security did not require setting up a settlement at this particular place. Period. Does this enippet of bearsay, and the structure built upon it, suggest a serious observance of the 'rules of

That is not all. A large part of the court's decision is devoted to an analysis of the mind of the government, leading to the conclusion that the prime reasons for its decision to set up the settlement was political, and that the security aspect was secondary. Only one member of the government was exempted from this detailed scrutiny. Only Weizman's minority opinion was treated as pure military expertise, free of political colouring. Weizman, it may be added, bas been a professional politician for 10 years; his opinions on security questions bave moreover been demonstrably inconsistent.

MORE SERIOUS in its political implications is the reflection in the judgment of the status of Judsa, Samaria and Gasa. The judgment would be inconceivable were it not for the court'e use of The Hague Covention as its guideline. The impression is thus created that Israel recognizee the validity of The Hague Convention for its rule in-Judea, Samaria and Gaza. This is not so. In creating this impression, the court may be eeen as being a victim of confused operative policies of the government, and certainly of the muddlebeaded presentation to the court of the government'e case.

The status of the area is not governed either by The Hague Convention or by the Fourth Geneva Convention, because they are not occupied territories. This has been the basis of all Israeli policy since 1967.

Judea, Samaria and Gaza could be treated as "occupied territory" only if they bad been sovereign Jordanian territory before 1967. They were not. Jordan's 1948 occupation was the result, of unprovoked invasion, and her annexation was illegal. Israel's right to sovereignty was given expression by the Knesset in June 1967, authorizing the government to extend Israeli law to the The Eshkol Government then exerclzed this authority only for Jerusalem, but it remains valid.

The confusion arises from the fact that the Israel government, of its free will. decided that while the Hague and Geneva conventions did not apply to these areas, she would ss act in accordance with their bumanitarian provisions. Indeed, she went further. Thus the whole process whereby residents of Judea and Samaria appeal to the court was a spontaneous Israell gesture.

But is is obviously of the first with the question of the status of the areas and that here the court would act according to the decision of the government. He then, quite foruitously remarked: "It is a mistake to think (as I recently read in a newspaper) that the Geneva Convent tion does not apply to Judea and Samaria. It does apply!"

Did Justice Witkon only read it in a newspaper. It he unaware that this is the established doctrine of the Israeli Government, by which he is bound? Is it permissible for a judge thus to inject a presumedly legal opinion into a court decision — without giv-ing any grounds — on an issue which is at the heart of the international campaign against the Jewish State?

THE SUPREME COURT decision is directed to the specific case of Ellon . = Moreh. It does not pretend to establish a precedent. It is inconceivable that the government will not draw conclusions from its grave eignificance. It is still possible to rescue the Likud's programms of Jewish settle ment throughout Eretz Yisrael. A sane and feasible policy, however, must be thought out and calculated: It must be explicable and free of the broken promises which not only. destroy the government's credibility but crush the spirit of Idealism and self-sacrifice which still exist in this nation. It must also ensure its efficient and convincing presentation - that will stand up in a court of lsw.
